no clues remain—Wex is careful to leave few leads at the scenes of his murders. However, with a successful DC 20 Diplomacy check to gather information, a character confirms that all similar recent murders (of which there have been seven) have occurred in southern Old Kintargo. This latest victim was a woman named Myrletta (a CC female, see page 5), the apartment's manager and she has very little information to offer on her own safety, and attempts to intimidate her are usually difficult. A successful DC 25 Intimidation check is required to secure her cooperation. Conversely, she appreciates 35 rolls and awards a successful DC 15 Diplomacy check. Myrletta's corpse doesn't get a save if Hetam or another chaotic good character casts the spell; otherwise, the corpse has a Will save bonus of +4. Myrletta's corpse confirms she was attacked late at night, and while she didn't get a good look at her assailant, she knows he was a Varisian man. He attacked her with a kukri that glowed red, while the man himself wore a suit of dark leather armor that incorporated an apron with many pockets. The two most significant clues that you should try to work into her answers are that she noticed the attacker walked with a limp and had a metal-and-leather leg brace, and that his leather apron smelled faintly of rancid cheese and urine. Researching the Clues: Three clues should help the PCs identify a suspect. With a successful DC 12 Craft check associated with metalworking or forging, a character notes that leather armor that incorporates numerous pockets in an apron is likely the garb of an artisan. A character who succeeds at a DC 15 Craft (mechanical or similar) check or a Knowledge (arcana) check notes that the unusual stick of rancid cheese and urine is likely from slurrk grease, which is often used in the construction and maintenance of clockworks. With a successful DC 15 Knowledge (local) check (or a DC 20 Diplomacy check to gather information), a character recalls that Vespam Artisans is Kintargo's largest manufacturer of clockworks—further, this workshop is located square in the section of Old Kintargo where the murders have occurred. In addition, a character who succeeds at a DC 20 Diplomacy check to gather information about people known to wear metal-and-leather leg braces in Kintargo turns up a list of a mere five people, only three of whom are human, and only one of whom is a Varisian.
